

FriendFinder Networks Wins Top Honors at the 2017 XBIZ Awards

Campbell, CA – January 27, 2017 – FriendFinder Networks (FFN), the company behind AdultFriendFinder.com and Cams.com, took home top honors at the 2017 XBiz awards. Touted as “the adult industry’s biggest night,” the XBiz awards honors the outstanding achievements of leaders in the online adult entertainment industry.

After receiving a whopping five nominations this year, FFN took home two trophies: one for Adult FriendFinder as Adult Site of the Year – Dating, and another on the executive side for Affiliate Manager Courtney Rudolph, who was voted Marketing Executive of the Year.

“Even after two decades and dozens of awards ceremonies, being recognized by your colleagues and friends in the business never gets old,” said Jon Buckheit, CEO of FriendFinder Networks. “We have invested a ton of resources not only into maximizing our dating offerings in 2016, but also to amplify our live broadcast platform and appeal. It’s great to see that people took note and we are grateful to our affiliates, partners, and friends for giving us their votes.”

Rudolph, who also received the GFY award for Best Company Rep, was thrilled to be recognized by XBiz, especially because the award was voted on by the very peers she admires the most. “I really appreciate everyone who voted for me, as well as the amazing team I have the honor of working with every day,” she said. The 2017 XBiz Awards ceremony was held on January 12th in downtown Los Angeles and hosted by the legendary Ron Jeremy.
